

THE MAP SHRINKS WHEN STEEL MEN SPECIFY "ERIE"

● A great freighter steams into port . . . and mechanical hands dip ore from her hold. Molten metal pours from furnaces . . . and huge ingots rumble on rollers. Steel parts swing down a production line . . . and finished products are rushed to the user. ● Erie shrinks the map by shortening the time in transit between the scenes of operation. In every phase of handling and hauling raw materials, semi-finished or finished products, the speed of Erie movements saves time and cuts costs for steel men and users of steel. Likewise you will benefit when you specify "via Erie" in your shipping orders.
